

Boudin: Prepare now for hurricane season

BY TRACI BONNEY

If a hurricane hit the Coast tomorrow, would you be ready for it?

Tomorrow begins the 1990 hurricane season, and according to the experts, residents of coastal areas could be in for some nasty weather.

Hancock County Civil Defense Director Bobby Boudin said, "The predictions are that we're going to be back into some major storms in the '90s."

"In the 1940s, '50s and '60s, we had some really bad storms."

In the '70s it slowed down a bit, then it started getting a little worse in the '80s. Now we're looking at some bad ones again.

Boudin said most homes in the area can withstand hurricane-force winds. "It's just the tidal surge that's the big problem. Your house might be able to take the winds, but what if it's in a low-lying area?"

Local residents should begin preparing now, he said, so that they won't be rushed and panicked if a hurricane should strike.

"Each family should have a family plan. First, you need to decide if you're going to stay or go."

"If you decide to go, you need to have a good, thought-out plan."

Boudin recommended that those who choose to evacuate consider going east or west — but not into New Orleans, where a good rain causes massive flooding — instead of north.

"Almost everybody goes

Priorities needed for five year plan — Magee

BY TRACI BONNEY

Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District Superintendent Robert Magee has great hopes for the district's recently adopted five year plan.

The plan, which lists goals and objectives for the school district to study, budget and implement over the next five school years, was mandated by the state to fulfill accreditation requirements for the district.

The goals and objectives are listed in five sections and deal with many aspects of the school district, including staff development, positive school atmosphere, improving education and instruction, and enhancing plant operations.

The plan was passed last week at a special school board meeting. The document, which is 83 pages long, represents many hours of work and much thought, Magee said.

The plan does fulfill accreditation requirements. However, it does not outline specific tactics to accomplish listed objectives. "We still need to establish priorities, develop strategies to carry out our goals and objectives, and assign tasks to those who can best execute them," he said.

Dr. Betty Jones, chairperson of the five year plan community committee and author of the document, agreed but stressed that the plan is not just a pile of paper.

"It's a plan of action. The details of how it will be accomplished are not specifically outlined in it, but it is a plan of action."

Both Jones and Magee hope

School officials hope for higher test scores

BY TRACI BONNEY

Local school district officials are happy about, but not content with, the recently released scores for the Functional Literacy Exam (FLE) and the Basic Skills Assessment Program (BSAP) test.

The FLE was given to high school juniors, while the BSAP was administered to third, fifth and eighth graders. The two test batteries evaluate skills levels in reading, math and writing.

Scores in both the Hancock County and Bay-Waveland school districts exceeded the state average for third graders, and either exceeded, equalled or almost equalled the state average in fifth, eighth and 11th grades.

Robert Magee, superintendent of the Bay-Waveland School District, said, "We are somewhat pleased with our scores. We are not satisfied, but we did hold our own."

"I want to thank all the teachers and students who worked so hard to prepare for the tests. I really am grateful for their efforts."

Magee said the score that most concerned him was the eighth grade BSAP math score, which fell 7.5 points below the state average.

"We are still assessing the problem areas and looking at ways to improve them."

Bay Masonic Lodge receives special Washington portrait

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

The Bay St. Louis Masonic Lodge No. 429 received a special gift from New Orleans artist Mary E. Russell, a portrait of George Washington, first Grand Master of the Masons in the United States.

The presentation of the portrait was made to the Bay St. Louis Lodge at a regular communications meeting and was received by Worshipful Master Richard Bourgeois.

Among those present for the special presentation included dignitaries and members of the Masonic Order from the States of Louisiana and Mississippi.

Most Worshipful past Grand Master of the State of Louisiana, Eugene Love, a Masonic historian, gave a background on George Washington and his affiliation with the Masonic Fraternity.

Brother Love made the presentation of the portrait of Washington to the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Mississippi, Ed Quillen; who in turn presented it to Master Bourgeois of the Bay St. Louis Lodge.

The Bay St. Louis Lodge was chartered in 1857 as Lodge No. 147 and reorganized in 1895 as No. 429.

A wooden frame building was replaced by the current Lodge, a three-story brick building, in 1925 at the Main Street location.

The building was named the "Stokoe Memorial Building," because of a sizeable contribution by A.L. Stokoe, owner of the Bay Ice, Light & Bottling Works.

The Lodge's first floor has been rented for many years to several attorneys, savings & loan offices and other businesses.

The contractor was Geary & Oakes. Geary was a resident of

KILLING TIME

By Traci Bonney

Reflecting on Memorial Day

What did you do Memorial Day?

I thought I would spend the day twiddling my thumbs, wishing I were off work like just about everyone else in the U.S. After all, most of my contacts were out for the day, so it was a bit difficult to find something to write about.

I did find something to do, though. I attended two American Legion memorial services to take pictures. The services made me think of my grandfather, a veteran who died 11 years ago from cancer, and my uncle, a veteran who is still alive.

Often, those of us who never fought in a war get bored with the war stories of those who did. I haven't heard too many war stories, so I haven't really experienced that.

I have heard and read about it, though—it seems the advice columns too often have letters from relatives of veterans who are tired of hearing the same stories a hundred times about people they don't know and places they've never been.

Sometimes I wish I could hear more of those stories. I don't see my uncle often—usually only at Christmas—and my grandfather didn't talk about his time in the service.

I don't know too much about war. I'm too young to even have volunteered for service in a war. I do know, though, that those men and women who have lived through wars have found out things about life and death that many of us never confront.

I also know that until Jesus comes again, we won't see peace on this planet, no matter how much people clamor for it.

So there will be armies and the need for armies—and navies, marine corps, air forces and other military forces—for a while yet.

What did you do Memorial Day?

I thought about freedom and the cost we have paid and are paying as a nation to keep it, and the cost paid by those individuals both who have gone before and who are still alive.

I thought about a man I never knew very well, but still called Grandpa.

I thought about a military funeral, the only one I've ever attended, for my grandpa, and how my heart tore in grief when Taps was played and the 21-gun salute was fired.

I thought about another Sacrifice for freedom, one we commemorated last month.

What did you do Memorial Day?

Hi Folks,

As most of you know, I retired from business in March of this year and liquidated my floor company. Now, two young couples that have been friends of mine for years, (one of whom was a valued employee of mine for nine years), have formed a new company and leased a portion of our former location.

These two couples are dedicated to quality work and pleasing their customers in the field of carpet, sheet vinyl, tile, hardwood flooring and ceramic tile.

Though I have no connection of any kind with this new company, I believe that if you give them a chance to serve you on your floor work you will be well pleased.

My family and I will always be grateful for the wonderful patronage given to our company during our thirty-two years of existence.

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Sunday is the big day for the Bay St. Louis Beachfront and Children's Art festivals.

The event is sponsored by the Bay St. Louis Business Association and gets underway at noon.

There will be two stages for musical entertainers, one at Court Street and Beach Boulevard and the other south of de Montluzin.

Among the scheduled entertainer groups are Keith Hoda, Pat Murphy, Change To Eden, Huey & Co., Leader, St. Rose de Lima Choir and Speed-O and the Rocket 88's.

A special guest appearance is scheduled by Michelangelo Mutant Ninja Turtle, courtesy of Winn Dixie. The appearance should be, among others, one of the most popular events for youngsters.

All types of exhibits, including from out-of-state, arts and crafts and booths will be at the festival which will run through sunset.

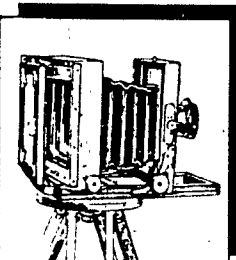

See you at the festival, and remember, entrance fee is $2 each.

Many folks, including myself were surprised by the sudden change in the weather Sunday evening.

The showers and strong winds came so fast that many folks, not to mention some boaters, were caught off guard.

I have heard of some boaters who had some very rough riding getting in during the heavy squall.

This is the time of year when weather conditions can change very rapidly, and residents should always keep this in mind. While boating, a small cloud can appear and all of a sudden you are in a squall.

DOESN'T LOOK GOOD—Tar is bleeding on the surface of Lower Bay Road, especially in several of the steep curves. The road was recently sealed as a State Aid Project. Hancock County Supervisor Robert Peterson reports he has contacted state officials about the serious condition of the vital link. (Echo staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

EDITORIAL

Lower Bay Road needs immediate attention

Lower Bay Road once again appears in need of immediate attention. It is not necessary to wait until someone becomes a victim of the road's condition before some action is taken.

The surface of the vital thoroughfare to Clermont Harbor, Lakeshore and Ansley is bleeding with tar in many sections.

It is our understanding that the recent (late summer 1989) sealing was done under state guidance as it is a State Aid Road.

Hancock County Supervisor Robert Peterson, in whose district the road is, has contacted state officials on the thoroughfare's condition and it is hoped some action will be taken immediately.

The recent warm weather seems to be the culprit on this vital link, as it appears to once again be slick, especially around the curves.

Motorists are also faced with the accumulation of unwanted tar on their vehicles.

It was hoped that we do not need another string of serious accidents on Lower Bay Road to get the attention of state officials.

FROM THE CAPITOL

By Governor Ray Mabus

Much of our environment is unspoiled by mankind

It is almost impossible to imagine what Mississippi looked like centuries ago when Hernando de Soto trekked through Mississippi. It was 449 years ago this week that de Soto discovered the Mississippi River from the banks of what is now our state.

He must have encountered abundant wildlife, lush forests and large expanses theretofore untouched by "civilization."

The world and Mississippi are much different today. We have tamed the wild, we have cultivated the fields and we have settled the land.

But Mississippi is lucky compared to many states because much of our environment is unspoiled by the ravages of mankind. Those resources are in danger but if we act now, we can protect them for future generations.

This year I was pleased to sign three very significant bills passed by the Legislature to make sure our environment is not poisoned by pollution.

First, no permits will be issued for nonhazardous solid waste facilities such as landfills for one year. This will allow Mississippi to study a comprehensive statewide plan dealing with solid waste before needlessly endangering the public health and welfare. Our landfills are overflowing with garbage, and it is time we do something about it in the best possible way.

The second bill will establish a process for deciding where a commercial hazardous waste management facility in Mississiippi can be located. This bill is necessary because our neighboring states are closing off their facilities to hazardous waste from Mississippi. This is not a problem that will go away, and unless it is addressed, Mississippi could face serious consequences.

The third bill, the Waste Minimization Act of 1990, deals with one of the most pressing problems today—the huge amount of solid waste generated by our society. If we continue to produce waste at today's rate, there will never be adequate ways to dispose of it.

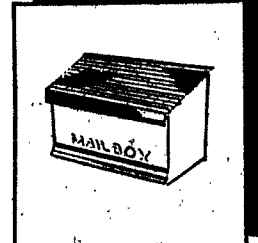

The Waste Minimization Act has as its goal to reduce by at least 25 percent the amount of solid waste generated in Mississippi by 1996. The bill calls for:

—Establishment of a state policy regarding the reduction of solid waste.

—Promotion of waste reduction through recycling, reuse or treatment of waste instead of its disposal.

—All state agencies to promote the development of recycling through mandatory programs. State government can set an example for all of Mississippi in the area of recycling.

These bills represent a very important step toward protecting Mississippi's environment, but our work has just begun. The dangers to our air, water, land and wildlife grow greater with each passing day. We must accelerate our efforts to make sure that we pass along the legacy of a clean environment to future generations.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

School board members, officials should behave as public employees

To the Editor,

At a special meeting of the Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board on Thursday, May 24, the long-awaited Five-Year Plan for Educational Improvement was adopted unanimously.

The 83-page plan is the result of hundreds of hours of study, discussion and input from teachers, administrators and concerned citizens and establishes annual goals and objectives for the school district on each level from the classrooms to the lunchrooms.

While I applaud the board for taking action, I am deeply concerned about the way it was taken and some of the comments made during this meeting and the previous meeting.

At the previous meeting, president Chuck Benvenutti asked secretary Linda Penrose to serve on a committee to study the drop-out problem we have. Penrose told Benvenutti she had told him before she would not serve on a committee for him again now or in the future.

I do not think it appropriate or acceptable that an elected official may publicly refuse to accept his or her responsibility to serve the office.

Benvenutti called Thursday's meeting for the board to discuss the plan as a group before they made a decision on it; to the best of my understanding, the members had reviewed the plan individually, but never as a group.

Benvenutti spent the lion's share of the meeting going through the plan, noting his reservations and suggesting changes. The other four board members had very little to say.

Penrose had submitted her opinions to Dr. Betty Jones, as she was requested to do, but would not offer them to the board at the public meeting.

Finally, Superintendent Robert Magee informed the board and the public that no matter what was in the "book" we (the school district) couldn't possibly accomplish it all. Though we do have our work cut out for us, we certainly don't need what could easily be a self-fulfilling prophecy from our leader.

The people of the school district would not be allowed, as employees on the job, to function as some of these people do. I challenge these people to keep a closer watch on the governing body of the schools their children attend, the schools for which they pay taxes. These people are employees of the public and should behave as such and be treated as such...

Sincerely,
Rachael Thiach

Taxpayers' money wasted by Congress

To the Editor,

It seems that in all the many words which have been written about taxes and national debts, little if anything is being done by our Congress to alleviate many of the areas which spend our tax money in a ridiculous manner.

Most of us know about and detest the money which goes to finance art which is hard-core pornography at best. Whoever believed art should be subsidized by the taxpayer? If an artist isn't good enough to make it on his own, he doesn't deserve recognition.

But what about such ridiculous programs as a $107,000 study, by the National Institute of Mental Health, of "the sexual looking, classical conditioning of sexual arousal, and improvement of copulatory performances with practice, of the Japanese quail?"

The project concluded that male quails showed a distinct preference for a female quail over male quails and female ducks. Seems that quails have more common sense than many human beings.

Along with this goes other thousands and millions into studying the possibility of reducing stress in pregnant hogs by having them jog; whether sunfishes that drink tequila sunfishes display more aggressiveness than those that prefer gin and tonic; why monkeys and humans clench their jaws and gnash their teeth, and do pigeons understand economic principles?

Now for the life of me, I can't see where our government has any business in any of these fields.

How about the Defense

Department using military planes at the cost of $2,334 per hour to fly 21 members of Congress and 80 "officials" (read wives, staff and friends) to the Paris Air Show?

What's wrong with the American people that we allow this to continue? Why don't we do some housecleaning in Washington?

These men are "hired help," whether they want to accept this or not, we pay them to "run the government. It seems that the majority of them answer the question, "When is it the best time to throw money away on nonsense?" by saying, "When it's other people's (meaning us, the taxpayers') money."

Personally, I've had enough! I intend to do something about it!

Sonya D. Neal, 18, of 207 Parkwood Dr., Gulfport, was arrested May 26 at 11 p.m. and charged with possession of a controlled substance, cocaine, according to Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Glenn Strong.

The arrest was a result of a traffic stop in Waveland, where Officer Kent Malley observed Neal speeding. A subsequent search of the vehicle revealed a small packet of cocaine, according to Strong.

Neal was released from the Hancock County Justice Facility on $1,000 bond. Hancock Metropolitan Narcotics Task Force officer Jimmy Varnell is in charge of the investigation.

north," he said. "The traffic is bad, and you have to go slap up above Jackson to find a hotel room."

Of course, he added, those with relatives to the north needn't worry about hotels.

However, other weather tendencies, such as flash flooding, tornadoes and heavy lightning, can plague you even after you are out of hurricane range. Boudin pointed out that more people died in Virginia than on the Gulf Coast after Hurricane Camille hit, because the 20 inches of rain that fell on Virginia caused severe flash flooding that destroyed entire villages.

Those who choose to stay instead of evacuating need to ask themselves a few questions, such as:

Is the house safe? Can it withstand the winds, and is it on high ground?

If you need medication, do you have enough on hand? If you need special medical attention, will you be able to get to the doctor or hospital?

Do you have enough canned and dry food, food for pets and drinking water in the house to last several days if necessary?

Do you have enough emergency supplies, such as candles, matches, flashlights, blankets and a first aid kit?

Boudin said those who decide to evacuate to a shelter will need to make arrangements for their pets, since none can be brought to shelters.

He also said those who have weapons may want to either lock them in the trunk of a car or turn them in to the police department until the danger is past.

Whether you decide to leave or sit the storm out, you need to secure outdoor objects such as lawn chairs, garbage cans and barbecue grills before the storm strikes.

Boudin did not recommend buying a generator for use during a hurricane. He said that unless you run it on a regular basis, a generator is not always a reliable energy source.

If you lose electricity during a storm, and it may be some time before power is restored, he said it may be good to consider buying one after the storm to use until the electricity is back.

One other precaution Boudin suggested is to cut off water and gas, especially if you plan to evacuate. He said he has heard many tales of damage and high utility bills because of pipes that burst during a hurricane.

to see parts of the plan being implemented next year.

In answer to a question concerning his statement at the board meeting that the district cannot manage the plan as it is, Magee said, "I said that the document as it stands is unmanageable by the district, and I still stand by that statement."

"I think the plan needs to be refined and condensed some before we can manage it. I think when that's done we will be able to manage it."

Jones said she had a little difficulty with the term "unmanageable", and explained, "I think 'manageable' is being able to address and react to each line item in the plan in the next year. I think we can do that."

The two concurred that their views of the "manageability" of the plan come from their different roles in its execution, and that they are not at odds with each other concerning the document.

Jones said the committee will continue to inform the school board and the community of its progress in studying, planning and implementing the objectives outlined.

She also said there will be a public hearing on the plan during each of the next five school years.

Magee said, "It is my hope that this document can be refined and can become truly a long-range plan for the school district, something we can really use in the next few years."

Stennis ASRM funded in NASA $550 million contract

NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., awarded a $550 million contract to design and construct facilities at Yellow Creek near the city of Iuka where the next generation of space shuttle solid rocket motors will be tested.

U.S. Senators Trent Lott and Thad Cochran, who made the announcement, said a portion of the half billion dollar contract will fund a static motor testing stand at NASA's Stennis Space Center near Bay St. Louis.

The recipient of the $550 million contract is Lockheed Missiles and Space Company in Sunnyvale, Calif.

The Mississippi senators said the contract awarded Friday is a companion to one awarded to Lockheed on May 11, covering design, development, test and evaluation of the new rocket motor. Lockheed is subcontracting the ASRM facilities work to Rust International in Birmingham, Ala.

Approximately $314 million of the facilities contract is designated for design and construction of new buildings or modification of existing structures, according to the senators, and approximately $236 million for purchase and installation of tooling and equipment.

"The construction effort will employ a peak work force of approximately 1,000 to 1,500 people," Lott and Cochran said. "More than 60 buildings at Yellow Creek, Stennis and NASA's Michoud Assembly Facility near New Orleans will be constructed, refurbished or expanded, with Yellow Creek being the site of most of this activity."

Approximately two-thirds of the facilities at Yellow Creek will be new buildings and the other third will be modifications to existing buildings.

The construction work is expected to be performed in about 3 1/2 years.

Eighth grade BSAP scores fell below the state average in all categories, with the greatest gap being one of 3.4 points in writing.

Pair added that, like officials in the Bay-Waveland district, he and others in the Hancock County district are assessing the curriculum and teaching techniques being used at this time.

Vidalia sweet onions available for short time

By Ann O. Rushing

For a very short time the magic soil of Vidalia, Ga. brings to life the sweetest tasting onion in the world... the Vidalia sweet onion.

The Vidalia sweet onion is a flattish topped onion with a rounded base. It is typified by its mild flavor or more accurately, its lack of pungency. The onion is prized by onion connoisseurs for the sweet breath one is left with after eating the ordinarily potent vegetable.

Some Vidalia fanatics even go so far as to say that it can be eaten in the same manner as an apple. As for the famed sweetness of the onion, tests show it to have a 12.5 percent natural sugar content, about the same as a Valencia orange. An apple, on the other hand, has only 11 percent natural sugar, and an ever-popular Coca-Cola, 12 percent.

There are Vidalia onions grown in Mississippi, however, there is much debate as to the reason the same variety grown in other parts of the country is a hot, hard onion, while the ones grown in the Vidalia, Ga. area are sweet and mild.

In the small certified growing region in and around Vidalia, the sandy loam soil conditions of the farmlands are very different from the heavy clay laden soil commonly attributed to most of the state.

It is in this sandy, low sulfur soil that the onions become so sweet and mild flavored.

Because of the long growing season, Vidalia sweet onions are very expensive to grow. Seeds are planted in August, but the onions will not be ready for harvest until late April or early May.

Popular demand makes the marketing season very short; usually by mid-June they are all gone. Because of the higher market prices true Vidalia sweet onions command, counterfeiting in the past has become widespread.

Onions grown in other states that look like Vidalia sweet onions were placed in bags and labeled as Vidalia sweet onions. These were not genuine and consumers found their purchase very disappointing.

This problem became so serious over the years that growers from Texas began shipping their onions into the state of Georgia. In an effort to help eliminate the counterfeiting, the Georgia Legislature made misrepresentation of the Vidalia onion a felony punishable by a three-year maximum sentence and a $5,000 fine. Unfortunately, this law could only regulate Vidalia onions shipped and sold in the state of Georgia.

Now for the big news! A federal marketing order has now been approved by the federal government. It is now a federal felony for any grower to label onions "Vidalia" or "Vidalia type" onions that are grown and produced outside the authorized growing area as prescribed by the state of Georgia.

In order to maximize the storage time on Vidalia Sweet Onions, immediately remove the onions from their bag and separate them from touching each other. This eliminates them from forming "hot spots" on their surfaces, which is the beginning of the spoilage process.

For best results, the following steps should be taken:

1. Immediately remove the onions from their bag.

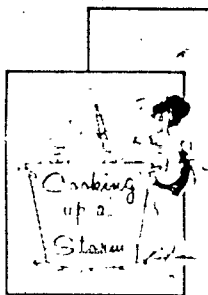

2. Keep in a cool, dry storage area and away from direct sunlight and moisture.

3. Wrap each onion individually in newspaper and store in the crisper section of your refrigerator. By wrapping in newspaper, it allows the onion to "breathe." Do not wrap in any type "film product," as it will have the opposite effect on the onion.

4. Store in pantyhose. Tie a knot between each onion and simply cut off as needed.

Separate and place product on "screen type" material. This allows air to circulate over and under the onions.

If properly stored and cared for, Vidalia sweet onions can last three to five months.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

As we drove along the sun-splashed South Carolina coastal roads recently en route from Myrtle Beach to Charleston, we saw mute evidence all along the way of Hurricane Hugo's fury unleashed upon the area last fall.

Much progress, of course, has been made in the ensuing months; but as we on the Coast, survivors of 1969's Hurricane Camille and its tremendous fury know only too well, the "way back" is a long and arduous one.

And so, of course, we felt waves of empathy for the residents of the area and admiration for their giant efforts at rebuilding, a tribute to mankind's unquenchable spirit!

Everywhere on Pawley's Island, generations-old summer retreat for the area, there was the sound of hammers and saws as repairs were made. And, as we came into McClellanville, we saw debris still being cleared (we all know how long it all takes!) and homes being worked on. However, just about everyone had taken time out from labors a few days earlier to hold the Blessing of the Fleet along Jeremy Creek alongside the town which was started as a summertime retreat for townspeople of Charleston.

Happily, as you have no doubt heard, Charleston's famed historic district is by this time in quite good shape, as are most of the stately homes along the Battery in the harbor, although the saws and hammers are busy in this area, also. And, so are the sightseers! And the restaurants in Charleston are busy, also!

Speaking of restaurants and food, a favorite Charleston dessert, dating from the time of the French Huguenots' arrival in the 17th century, is enjoyed all around the South Carolina Low Country, and with good reason. Here's:

HUGUENOT TORTE
2 eggs
3/4 cup sugar

1/4 cup unsifted flour (all purpose)

2 tsp. baking powder

1/4 tsp. salt

2 tsp. pure vanilla extract

1 cup coarsely chopped, peeled apples

1 cup coarsely chopped pecans

1 tsp. lemon juice

Sweetened whipped cream

Pecan halves (optional)

Heat the oven to 325 degrees.

Lightly oil a 9-inch square (or 10-inch round) baking dish. In a medium bowl, beat eggs with electric beater at high speed until thick and lemon-colored—it takes five minutes, perhaps a bit more. Gradually beat in the sugar until the mixture is very thick.

Add the flour, baking powder and salt, and beat just until the mixture is blended together. Fold in the vanilla, apples, chopped pecans and lemon juice. Turn into the prepared pan or dish, and bake for 40 minutes, until the top is crusty and brown.

Kindergarten now mandatory prior to entering first grade

A requirement of the BEST bill, effective July 1, is that all children must satisfactorily complete kindergarten before entering the first grade.

The State Board of Education at its May meeting stated that all established kindergarten programs in the state, public or non-public, will be deemed acceptable for the 1990-91 school year.

However, minimum standards and guidelines to establish a program as an acceptable kindergarten will be set for the 1991-92 school year. These guidelines will be written by

State Department staff and presented to the State Board for approval in December, 1990.

Bay St. Louis Little Theatre presents 'Any Number Can Die'

By ED CRICKMER

The Bay St. Louis Little Theatre group has done it again! For the second time this year they have a hit.

Their latest production is the comedy-mystery "Any Number Can Die," directed by Ed Scanlan.

The play takes place in the late twenties. The costumes are some of the best I have seen in a community theatre. Someone spent a lot of time researching the 20's costumes used in this play.

The set design is outstanding. The entire set is done in black and white. The effect is like watching an old black and white TV drama.

Don George and Elizabeth Hart open the play with small but significant parts. They set the pace as to what will follow, so listen closely.

Valerie Fisher, a veteran from the Waveland Players, plays Zenia the Maid. Her Creole accent is good, and her performance is excellent.

Clem Acker, a resident of Diamondhead, portrays the Lawyer Roger Masters. Not only does he look the part, he plays it very well.

Carol Young and Michael Ruf, both accomplished actors, play Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop who are key members of the cast.

Carol handles her character very well and looks the part in her 20's-style dress. Michael also plays a convincing role as the "adoring" husband.

Edgars is played by Ed Scanlan, the actor/director. Scanlan was my favorite. He plays his part exceptionally well. He reminds me of "Igor" from the old monster movies.

Eleanor McCandless is the Agatha Christie type in this play. Her stage presence adds much to the play. She handles her major role well, and her interactions with fellow detective Ed Craig are worth watching.

The beautiful Sally, played by Deborah Wolf, makes her theatrical debut in this play. Her confidence and ability are outstanding. One would never guess this is her first time-on stage.

Bobbey Poole, one of my favorites in "Marat/Sade," comes back to the stage as Carter in this production. Poole is one of the best community theatre actors I've seen in a long time. He is very diverse and takes his acting seriously.

Jack Regent, a newspaper man looking for a good story, is played by Martin Booda. Booda is a believable newspaper man in this major role. Booda delivers his lines well and is very well at ease on stage.

Sherlock Holmes watch out, Hannibal Hix is here. Ed Craig, a long-time actor with the Bay Theatre, offers the audience our own masterful detective. He is great!

My only complaint with the play was the background music; it was sometimes too loud, making it hard to hear the actors.

Other than that the play was very funny and a true mystery. You will be second guessing all night long trying to solve the mystery. It is a fun show that everyone will enjoy.

Performances are scheduled for June 1 and 2 at the Bay Theatre on Boardman Avenue. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m., and admission is $5.

Winning design for Vietnam memorial to be unveiled June 6

In 1988 the Mississippi Vietnam Veterans Memorial became a reality as the legislature authorized its construction on the Gulf Coast and provided for the counties and municipalities to donate to the project.

The site for the memorial was conveyed to the committee by the city of Biloxi.

The committee secured the help of the Mississippi State University's School of Architecture to come up with possible designs for the project.

Since that time, Mississippi State's students had submitted nine design proposals, and the themes from these designs were used by the architects in the State of Mississippi to develop their design proposals. There were a total of 20 entries in the beginning design competition.

The designs were presented to a jury from the Architects Institute of America in Atlanta to narrow the designs to four finalists which were revealed at the State Capitol on Feb. 28.

The three finalists are T. Steven Davis, Mark Vaughn and Samuel Mockbee. Patti Buser was awarded an honorable mention for her entry.

The Vietnamese community had also submitted a model, which was shown to all the finalists. The Mississippi Chapter of the Architects Institute of America is in charge of the design competition.

Judging of the finalists was completed May 26 by the Georgia Tech School of Architecture in Atlanta.

Governor Ray Mabus will unveil the winner in the design competition at a ceremony at the Old Capitol Building on June 5 at 2 p.m. The unveiling will take place in the House Chamber. Refreshments will be served afterward at the War Memorial Building across the street courtesy of the American Legion.

The Army National Guard Band will provide entertainment during the festivities. The public is invited and encouraged to attend this all important ceremony honoring those who paid the supreme sacrifice for their state and country.

TED towing rules are in effect

Regulations that require shrimp trawlers to use Turtle Excluder Devices or 90-minute tow times went into effect May 1.

The requirements apply to inshore waters from North Carolina to Texas. Requirements for TED use in offshore waters of the Gulf of Mexico have been in effect since March 1.

The regulations are in effect through Nov. 30 this year. In the Gulf in subsequent years the requirements will be in effect from March 1 through Nov. 30.

Shrimp trawlers, 25 feet or longer, fishing in offshore waters must have all nets (except try nets) equipped with certified TEDs. Vessels less than 25 feet can use certified TEDs or restrict tow times to 90 minutes or less.

In inshore waters all shrimp trawlers regardless of size must limit tow times to 90 minutes or less or use certified TEDs.

Offshore waters are distinguished from inshore waters by the 72 COLREGS line. This line is depicted by a broken purple line, or is otherwise noted on NOAA's 1:80,000 scale coastal charts. Inshore waters in the Mississippi area include Mississippi, Chandeaur and Breton Sounds.

Information and technical assistance with TEDs are available from Sea Grant Advisory Service, 4646 W. Beach Blvd. Suite 1-E, Biloxi 39531, 388-4710.

McRae announces candidacy for Supreme Court seat

Chuck McRae, a 50-year-old Pascagoula attorney, announced his candidacy for Supreme Court Judge in the upcoming Democratic primary on June 5.

McRae will run in a 27-county area which includes most of the southern part of the state. A practicing attorney for more than 20 years, McRae has served as commissioner for the Mississippi State Bar, president of the Mississippi Trial Lawyers Association and is a member of its Board of Governors.

McRae said that he would offer a "new, aggressive approach to the high court." "More than 80 percent of the inmates in Parchman are there for drug-related acts. It's out of hand and we need someone on our court to stand up for our rights," he said.

"We must project an image of action. Mississippi's economic future depends on it. As your Supreme Court Justice, I'll work for Mississippi's future."

"As a school board attorney and lawyer to police associations, I've demonstrated my dedication to my community and to my family. Now I ask for your help on June 5 to work for our state's future."

McRae said the court can act as a catalyst in helping to solve the drug problem in our state. He is a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Navy 'invades' beach Friday

If you're driving along Beach Blvd. Friday morning, don't be surprised to see several military vehicles "invading" the beach below Bay Crafts.

The 15 vehicles that will be in the area are transporting the parts of a 50-foot Navy exhibit for the Beach Front Festival.

NAVAIDS, which will be a highlight of the exhibit, stands for Navigation Aids Support Unit. NAVAIDS is based at the Naval Construction Battalion Center in Gulfport, and is used to provide portable communication and electronic positioning systems.

The exhibit will include a 100-foot tall tower that is used to direct satellites in photographing the ocean floor in a coastal hydrographic survey mission.

Labat is finalist at Point Clear

Myron Labat, 14, is the runner-up in the Boy's 19-and-Under Division of the 1990 Point Clear (Alabama) Junior Open Tennis Tournament held May 26 and 27.

The division boasted 31 players from Alabama's Gulf Coast and from as far away as Birmingham.

Labat, who was the tournament's top seed, received the lone bye in the first round.

In the second round, he patiently out-steadied Rick Brewer of Daphne by a score of 6-2, 6-0.

Jerry Dyess, a tougher opponent from Fairhope fell prey to Labat's deep groundstrokes in the quarter-finals by a score of 6-3, 6-2.

Labat played his best match of the tournament in the semi-finals versus Karl Self, a serve-and-volley player from Fairhope. He used pin-point passing shots to win by a score of 6-0, 6-0.

Because of time and travel considerations and final exams, the championship match which was scheduled to be played on Monday, May 28, had to be played instead on Sunday afternoon. This meant that the players had to play the quarter-finals, semi-finals and the finals all on the same day.

Labat was defeated in the championship match by Stewart Shaw of Birmingham by a score of 6-4, 6-1.

Thus far in 1990, Labat's record includes one third-place finish, two second-place finishes and one tournament championship.

Smith signs with Meridian College

St. Stanislaus All-State pitcher Cedric Smith signed a baseball scholarship with Meridian Community College.

Smith, a five-year letterman with the Rock-A-Chaws, will play in the second annual East/West Gulf Coast All-Star game on June 9 and in the Mississippi High School All-Star game June 16 in Hattiesburg.

Smith has led the Rocks to district playoff twice in his career and also ends his high school career with 243 strikeouts, a 1.21 ERA, and a 25-13 record.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Smith of Bay St. Louis.

Carey plans summer baseball camp

William Carey College Coach Bobby Halford announced registration information for the annual summer baseball camp for boys ages eight through 16.

Campers will have the opportunity to learn baseball techniques from Halford and his staff. The Carey Crusaders won the NAIA District 30 championship and advanced to the NAIA area competition in Phoenix.

In addition to the opportunity to improve skills, the campers will participate in supervised recreational activities including goofy golf and movies.

The fee for dormitory campers is $135 which includes three meals per day, insurance, T-shirt and awards.

A $25 registration is required. The balance can be paid the first day of camping session.

Camp dates are June 11-15, ages 8-12; June 18-22, ages 13-16; and June 25-29, ages 17-19.

McIntyre joins Walt Disney World Career Start Program

BY LIZ HAAS

Thad McIntyre, a senior at Bay Senior High School, has recently accepted a position as an attractions host with the Walt Disney World Career Start Program. He was also offered a full-paid scholarship to their university, which is for employees only.

The company began recruiting in the spring of 1990 in Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Louisiana. They sent a form to Bay Senior High School requesting the names of those students the faculty felt could fulfill the position.

McIntyre's social studies teacher and the school counselor suggested his name for the job and encouraged him to seek the position. Later, the recruiter called to ask about his interest in the program and an interview was set up.

On May 2 in Hattiesburg, 24 applicants from the state were interviewed and McIntyre was the only one chosen that day.

He will be leaving September 14. Through the program, he is offered housing from September 19, 1990 to January 5, 1991, with a weekly payroll deduction. Then they will help him to find his own place to live.

Speaking of his career plans, he said, "I hope to earn a degree in public communications in two years because I would like to be able to work at the Disney World in France when it opens in two years."

He will be working a permanent job with

THAD MCINTYRE

Some of his responsibilities as a Walt Disney Attractions Host will include: greeting guests, giving lengthy narrations to large groups, loading and unloading guests, operating sophisticated ride systems, audience control, providing for the safety of the guests and light cleaning.

These responsibilities do not bother him because he is a very personable and friendly individual who enjoys dealing with the public.

Since December, 1989, he has been working part time at the Special "T" Shop after school. His school honors include: the Marine Award for Leadership, Band member, Business Club president and member of the French Club.

Avoid summer problems with latch key kids

By Eva Ann Dorris
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Patsy, like many mothers of the '90s, works outside the home. Her two children, ages 13 and 11, stay alone at home after school, but only for an hour to an hour and a half each day.

When school closes for the summer, Patsy's children will be alone most of the day. Although they haven't had any problems staying alone after school, Patsy is concerned about the longer period of unsupervised time.

She is worried they will become bored, and she is worried about the neighborhood children who come over to play.

"I stay afraid they will try to cook something and burn the house down in the process," she said. "And, I worry about other children playing in the house, tearing things up or getting hurt."

Patsy isn't alone in her worry. She is one of thousands of working parents in the state looking for solutions to summertime child care.

Norine Barnes, child and family development specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said communicating with children is the first step in making child care decisions and establishing at-home rules and regulations.

"Listen to feelings and concerns. Find out how your child feels about various options available," Barnes said. "If a child is in any way afraid to stay alone, you should make other arrangements."

Consider the age and maturity level of your child, as well as the community you live in," Barnes said. "If you live in a neighborhood or area that is supportive and stable, your decision may be different than if you live in an area that is unfriendly and mobile."

Staying at home alone all day might not be the only alternative. Barnes encouraged parents to check into day camp programs or recreational activities such as swimming lessons that can help break a daylong monotony.

Community activities such as 4-H, library reading programs or church youth programs can also provide good outlets for summertime energy.

"If a parent decides to leave a child alone for any length of time, they should be completely comfortable with their decision," Barnes said. "If they feel uncertain, they may pass their anxieties and uncertainty on to their children."

Barnes offered these suggestions to parents who must leave children alone at home.

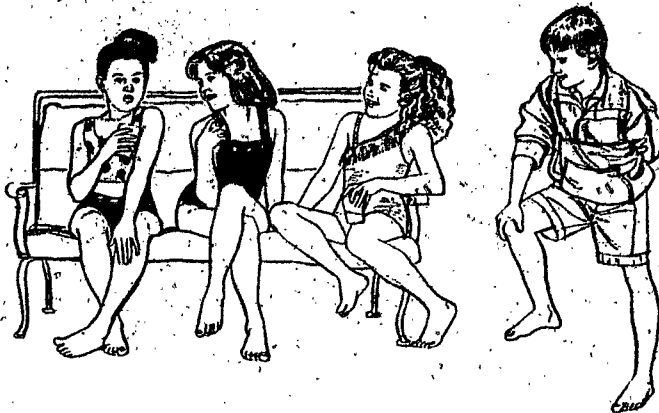

Make the home as burglar-proof as possible. Tell your children not to go into the house if they come home and the door is ajar, a window is broken or if anything looks unusual. Give instructions to go to a neighbor's house or a store to call and wait for you.

"Don't just expect a neighbor to be home," Barnes said. "Talk to your neighbors ahead of time, let them know your children will be alone and ask them to provide a watchful eye. Remember, if your neighbor is doing this for you, you need to provide an exchange where you can do something for them."

Teach children what to do in case of emergency and how and when to call the police, fire and ambulance.

Call your children once or twice during the day or have a certain time for them to call you.

Plan activities to keep your children occupied. Chores and projects are excellent ways to do this, Barnes said establishing expectations helps provide some structure to the day.

If you are changing or adding chores, be sure the children understand what's to be done and how to do it. A task that seems simple to an adult may be awkward for a child if the equipment is too heavy or the youth doesn't know what to do.

Write directions for favorite lunches or snacks. Be explicit, especially if the child has limited experience in the kitchen.

If the directions are for heating hot dogs in the microwave, specify what cover or plate to use, how to turn on the oven, at what setting and for how long.

Prepare a safety kit. It should contain an identification card, a list of important telephone numbers and first aid supplies for minor cuts and scrapes.

Children also need to understand the rules for having friends over and for other activities," Barnes said.

There may be certain places your children can go without special permission, but other places where they go should be checked with you first. If there are several children in the family, be sure each child knows what is expected of him or her, especially if the expectations are different.

"Be flexible and versatile," Barnes said. "Don't be afraid to change your child care arrangements. Continually evaluate all aspects of the situation."

"You must feel that what your child is doing while you're not at home promotes his or her positive growth and development," she said.
